PLAYER SPOTLIGHT

As a child, Jimmy was brought to the United States as a refugee from Uganda. “When I got to America, I know my life began. I wanted to give back to America so I joined the Marine Corps.”

Jimmy served three tours in Iraq and Afghanistan. He was severely injured in his final tour and endured years of rehabilitation. Jimmy now has a young son of his own and is striving to teach him the lessons he has learned about the importance of family, freedom and service.

Tennis Corps helps Jimmy stay physically fit and mentally strong and reminds him that lost things have a way of becoming found again.

“I played tennis in high school — that was in the 90s. After high school, I dropped my racquet, and I just found it last year. I’m getting back to tennis, and it’s getting me back on my feet.”
